

Reflection

The purpose of my plagiarism was to spread the word about how harmful bullying can be. Many younger students don't take it seriously, because they don't understand how it can damage a person. I felt the best way to accomplish this was through a poster, since not many students are going to read a whole essay on anti-bullying. What makes my work original is I gathered a bunch of related sources (namely, images and phrases that represent being strong) and converted them into a work that shows that not everyone is as strong as you make them out to be. I also took some sources that were related to bullying and spun them so that they worked in a different way. By putting my own spin on these things, I have created something original. While my work is original, there are some aspects of plagiarism in it. For instance, I did some patchwriting when writing the "plaque" for my poster. Other than that, I believe that my purpose is different enough from my sources that it can be considered original.

Key

- "While the mind...repetitive wounds" inspired from Nietzsche's phrase "What doesn't kill you makes you stronger"
- "leaving a wound...it to fester" inspired from the phrase "Time heals all wounds"
- Plaque passage as a whole swiped from Katy Butler's anti-bullying speech:
https://www.thebullyproject.com/anti_bullying_speech
- Poster image inspired from Knight Meme:
<https://imageresizer.com/meme-generator/edit/blue-armor-guy>
- Poster font and style inspired from "Stop Bullying" poster:
<https://www.amazon.com/Buddy-Bully-motivational-classroom-poster/dp/B0718Z7C14>